A photograph of the Bent County Courthouse tower. The tower is a square brick structure with a white clock face on its front face. It is topped with a tall, conical roof made of vertical wooden planks. The tower is part of a larger building with a white stone archway in front of it. The archway contains the text "BENT COUNTY 1889 COURTHOUSE". The background is a clear blue sky with some green trees on the sides.

The image shows the exterior of a large, single-story building with a prominent gabled roof. The building's facade is constructed from light-colored, rectangular stone blocks. The gable end is finished with a smooth, light-colored stucco. A dark brown cross-shaped decorative element is centered in the gable. The main entrance features a set of double doors with small windows, flanked by two small square windows. Above the entrance, the address "210 N. Main" is visible. There are several other windows along the ground floor, each with a dark brown lintel. A black street lamp stands to the right of the building. The sky is clear and blue.

A photograph of a rustic stone building with a central arched entrance and two windows on either side. The building is constructed from irregular, multi-colored stones. The archway is dark, suggesting an interior passage. The windows have white frames and multiple panes. The building is set against a background of trees and a clear sky. The text 'HOW DID NEW DEAL PROJECTS HELP DEVELOP LA JUNTA CITY PARK?' is overlaid in white, bold, sans-serif font across the upper portion of the image.

A photograph of the entrance to Willow Creek Park. In the foreground, there is a low wall made of reddish-brown stone blocks. A black sign with white text is mounted on the wall. To the right of the sign is a small green metal gate. Further right, a dirt path leads into the park, flanked by more stone walls and trees. A stop sign is visible on the path. The background shows a green lawn and more trees under a clear sky.
